Notice,

To Wheelwrights, Blacksmiths, Tanners, Harness-Makers, Saddlers, Hatters, &c.

BELIEVING as I do, that PROVIDENCE, at Fairfax Court-House, would be a suitable situation for mechanics of the above description, I offer to such, lots in that village for sale, on ground rent for ever—will build and furnish suitable houses and rent to them, or furnish brick to them to build with; and invite any who feel disposed to settle there, for the purpose of carrying on their respective trades to advantage, to come and view the situation. It is a very public place, the centre of the county, where the superior and county courts are held. The Little River Turnpike Road passes through this little town from Alexandria westward, and where all the public meetings for the county, &c. are held; and where trades of the aforesaid description being carried on, would meet with great encouragement, and be a public convenience to the country around. No situation can be more healthy—good water, and fire wood cheap. Mechanics of the above description must generally depend on the country people, farmers, &c. to be their customers. Here they would be in a convenient situation for all the purposes. I invite a call, and view for themselves. I would also furnish lots adjacent, from one to five acres each, for cultivation, pasture, &c. on moderate terms; all of which can be shown, and terms made known, on application to RICH'D. RATCLIFFE,

BANK OF THE UNITED STATES.

No. I.

A spirit which was supposed to have been tranquillized by a long possession of the government, appears to be resuming its original activity in Virginia. The decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mc Cullough against the state of Maryland has been seized as a fair occasion for once more agitating the publick mind, and reviving those unfounded jealousies by whose blind aid ambition climbs the ladder of power.

The bill for incorporating the bank of the United States had become a law, without exciting a single murmur. The reason is obvious. Those who fill the legislative and executive departments are elected by the people, and are of course popular. In addition, they possess great power and great patronage. Had they been unjustly attacked, champions would have arisen on every side, who would with equal zeal and ability have presented the truth to a public not unwilling to perceive it. But the Judges of the Supreme Court, separated from the people by the tenure of office, by age, and by the nature of their duties, are viewed with respect, unmingled with affection, or interest. They possess neither power nor patronage. They have no sops to give; and every coffee house furnishes a Cerberus, hoping some reward for that watchfulness which his bark proclaims; and restrained by no apprehension that any can be stimulated by personal considerations to expose the injustice of his attacks. We ouhgt not, therefore, to be surprised if it should be deemed criminal in the judicial department to sustain a measure, which was adopted by the legislature, and by the executive with impunity. Hostility to the Union, must cease to be guided by its usual skill, when it fails to select the weakest department as that through which a breach may be effected.

The Enquirer, the leading paper of Virginia, abounds with hostile attacks on this opinion. That which is written with most talent, most system, and most design, appears under the signature of Amphyction. The Editor assures his readers that it contains "a most satisfactory exposition" "of the alarming errours of the Supreme Court of the United States" in their interpretation of the constitution; and Amphyction himself does not leave his object to conjecture. "Most ardently" does he "hope that this decision of the Supreme Court will attract the attention of the state legislatures, and that Virginia will, as heretofore, do her duty."

The avowed object being of so serious a nature, it behoves not only the friends of the Bank, but the friends of the constitution, the friends of Union, to examine well the principles which are denounced as heretical, and those which are supported as orthodox.

The objections of Amphyction are to that part of the opinion which declares the act incorporating the bank to be constitutional. He introduces them with expressing his disapprobation of that mode of transacting their official duties which the Supreme Court has adopted. He would prefer seriatim opinions, to the combined opinion of the bench delivered by a single Judge.

On the justness of this criticism in general, or on its peculiar application to this particular case, I shall make no observation; because the principles expressed in this single opinion are neither more nor less vulnerable than they would have been if expressed in six separate opinions. But the criticism was made for the purpose of conveying an insinuation which marks the spirit in which the discussion is conducted. "We are not," says Amphyction, "informed whether the whole court united in the course of reasoning adopted by the Chief Justice, nor whether they all accorded in the various positions and principles he advanced."

Now I humbly conceive this is a subject on which we are informed. The opinion is delivered, not in the name of the Chief Justice, but in the name of the whole court. This observation applies to the "reasoning adopted," and to the various positions and principles which were advanced" as entirely as to the conclusions drawn from "those positions and principles." Throughout the whole opinion, the chief justice never speaks in the singular number, or in his own person, but as the mere organ of the court. In the presence of all the judges, and in their names he advances certain propositions as their propositions, and certain reasoning as their reasoning. I appeal to Amphyction himself, I appeal to every man accustomed to judicial proceedings, to determine whether the judges of the Supreme Court, men of high & respectable character, would sit by in silence, while great constitutional principles of which they disapproved, were advanced in their name, and as their principles. I appeal to the usage of the Supreme Court itself. Their decisions are reported, and are in possession of the public. It has often happened that a judge concurring in the opinion of the court, but on reasons peculiar to himself, has stated his own reasoning. The great case of the Nereid is one among many examples, of this course of proceeding. In some instances too it has occurred, that the judge delivering the opinion of the court has stated the contrariety of reasoning on which the opinion was formed. Of this, the case of Oliver v. the Union Insurance Co. is an example. The course of every tribunal must necessarily be, that the opinion which is to be delivered as the opinion of the court, is previously submitted to the consideration of all the judges, and, if any part of the reasoning be disapproved, it must be so modified as to receive the approbation of all, before it can be delivered as the opinion of all. Amphyction himself thinks so; for he says: "We are driven, however reluctantly, to the conclusion, that each judge approves of each argument and position advanced by the chief justice."

Why then has he suggested a contrary idea? He leaves us in no uncertainty for the answer to this question.

After stating that the subject is one "which has employed his (the Chief Justice's) thoughts, his tongue, and his pen as a politician and as an historian for more than thirty years," he adds that it "is one which has, perhaps more than any other heretofore drawn, a broad line of distinction between the two great parties in this country, in which line no one has taken a more distinguished and decided rank, than the Judge who has thus expounded the supreme law of the land."

The chief justice then is a a federalist; who was a politician of some note before he was a judge; and who with his tongue and his pen, supported the opinions he avowed. To expose the reasoning of the court to still greater odium, if it be possible we are told that "the liberal and latitudnious construction" he has attached to a term, in the constitution, had been attached to it," before him, "by Mr. Secretary Hamilton." The reasoning, then, of the court is, dexterously enough, ascribed to Mr Secretary Hamilton and the chief justice, two inveterate federalists. This question cannot be entrusted by Amphyction, to his exposition of the constitution, unless the spirit of party be introduced into the cause, and made its judge. How favorable this spirit is to truth, and to a fair exercise of the human judgement, Amphyction well knows. Had he admitted his opinion, including the reasoning, to be what it professes to,—what it must be—the opinion and reasoning of all judges,—four of whom have no political sin upon their heads;—who in addition to being eminent lawyers, have still the great advantage of being sound republicans—of having been selected certainly not for their federalism, by Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Madison, for the high stations they so properly fill, his argument would have been stripped of one powerful recommendation, and must have depended rather more on its intrinsic merit. We need not then be surprised that this improbable suggestion is made, altho' a sense of propriety has compelled the writer to abandon it as soon as its effects was produced.

Having thus prepared his readers for the dangerous errors contained in the opinion of the supreme court, Amphyction proceeds to inform them what those errours are.

"The first is the denial that the powers of the federal government were delegated by the states—and the second is that the grant of powers to that government, and particularly the grant of powers necessary and proper to carry the other powers into effect, ought to be construed in a liberal rather than a restricted sense."

But before Ampyhction can permit himself to enter on his first point, he deems it necessary to cast a little more odium on the opinion he is about to examine. "For what purpose" he asks, "did the federal court decide that question?" After stating that it was totally unnecessary, that the opinion on it "is obiter and extrajudicial;" he adds that "whether the powers of the federal government were delegated to it by the states in their sovereign capacity, or by the people, can make but little difference in the extent of those powers. In either case it is still true that the powers of that government are limited by the charter that called it into existence." &c.

I shall not controvert the proposition that the constitution ought to receive the same construction, whether its powers were delegated by the people or the states. That Amphyction entertains the same opinion, is brought into some doubt by the extreme importance he attaches to his theory.

If the powers of the general government were to be in no degree affected by the source from which they were derived, it is not easy to comprehend how the liberty of the American people can depend on the adoption of the one opinion or of the other. The origin of the government would seem to be a mere historical fact, which it would be desirable to settle correctly; but for the settlement of which it could scarcely be necessary to call on the legislatures of the respective states or to express so earnest a hope that "Virginia would, as usual do her duty." If it be possible for Amphyction to persuade himself that the right of the state legislatures "canvass" or "remonstrate against the public measures of the congress or of the President," depended on their having delegated to the general government all its powers, it would prove only with what facility the most intelligent mind may impose on itself, when pursuing a favorite and dominant idea. Surely nothing can be more obvious, nothing better established, than that the right to canvass the measures of government, or to remonstrate against the abuse of power, must reside in all who are affected by those measures, or over whom that power is exercised, whether it was delegated by them or not.—Were this allegation of Amphyction true, it would follow that the people have no right to canvass the measures of government, or to remonstrate against them. The right to canvass and remonstrate resides, according to his argument, in those only who have delegated the powers of the government. Those powers were delegated, not by the people, but by the states in their sovereign capacity. It follows that the states in their sovereign capacity, not the people, have the right to canvass public measures. If this conclusion be false, as it must be, the premises are false also; and that a man of Amphyction's intelligence should have advanced them, only proves that he is too little accustomed to political exposition, and is too confident of the prejudices he addresses, to be very attentive to the correctness of his positions, or to the accuracy of his reasoning.

But if Amphyction had not been more anxious to throw obloquy on the court than to ascertain its justice, he might have spared this unnecessary charge of travelling out of the case for the purpose of delivering extrajudicially, a doctrine so dangerous as he represents this to be. The principles he now maintains, appear to have been advanced, and relied on at the bar. "The counsel for the state of Maryland," we are told in the opinion, "have deemed it of some importance in the construction of the constitution to consider that instrument, not as emanating from the people; but, as the act of sovereign and independent states. The powers of the general government, it has been said, are delegated by the states who alone are truly sovereign, and must be exercised in subordination to the states, who alone possess supreme dominion. It is in consequence of this argument that the subject is introduced into the opinion.

His eagerness to censure must be much stronger than his sense of justice, who will criminate a court for noticing an argumont advanced by eminent counsel, as one of leading importance in the cause.

But waving any further discussion of these incidental observations, I will proceed to consider the first objection made to the opinion of the Supreme Court. It is stated to be "the denial that the powers of the federal government were delegated by the states."

This assertion is not literally true. The court has not, in terms, denied "that the powers of the federal government were delegated by the states," but has asserted affirmatively that it "is emphatically and truly a government of the people," that it "in form and in substance emenates from them."

If Amphyction chuses to construe the affirmative assertion made by the court into a negative assertion that "the powers of the government were not delegated by the states," I shall not contest the point with him unless he uses the word "states" in a different sense from that which great part of his argument imports. In what sense, let me ask, does he use the word? Does he mean the people inhabiting that territory which constitutes a state? Or does he mean the government of that territory? If the former, the controversy is at an end.—He concurs with the opinion he arraigns. The Supreme Court cannot be mistaken. It has said, not indeed in the same words but in substance, precisely what he says. The powers of the government were delegated, according to that opinion, by the people assembled in convention in their respective states, and deciding, as all admit, for their respective states.

If Amphyction means to assert, as I suppose he does, that the powers of the general government were delegated by the state legislature, then I say that his assertion is contradicted by the words of the constitution, and by the fact; and is not supported even by that report, on which he so confidently relies.

The words of an instrument, unless there be some sinister design which shuns the light, will always represent the intention of those who frame it. An instrument intended to be the act of the people, will purport to be the act of the people. An instrument intended to be the act of the states will purport to be the act of the states.—Let us examine those words of the constitution, which designate the source whence its powers are derived. They are: We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, &c. do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America."

The constitution then proceeds in the name of the people to define the powers of that government which they were about to create.

This language cannot be misunderstood. It cannot be construed to mean, "We the states, &c."

If still more complete demonstration on this point could be required, it will be furnished by a comparison of the words just recited from the constitution, with those used in the articles of confederation.

The confederation was intended to be the act of the states, and was drawn in language comporting with that intention. The style is: "Articles of confederation and perpetual union between the states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, &c." The 3d article is completely descriptive of the character of the instrument. It is in these words: "The said states hereby severally enter into a firm league of friendship with each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties, and their mutual and general welfare; binding themselves to assist each other against all force offered to, or attacks made upon them, or any of them, on account of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever."

The confederation was a mere alliance offensive and defensive, and purports to be what it was intended to be,—the act of sovereign states. The constitution is a government acting on the people, and purports to be, what it was intended to be,—the act of the people.

The fact itself is in perfect consonance with the language of the instrument. It was not intended to submit the constitution to the decision of the state legislatures, nor was it submitted to their decision. It was referred to conventions of the people "for their assent or ratification," whose decision thereon was not to be reported to the state legislatures but to congress. Had the legislature of every state in the union been hostile to the constitution, it would still have gone into operation, if assented to and ratified by the conventions of the people. With what propriety, then, can it be denied to be the act of the people?

On this part of the question also, a comparison with the mode of proceeding for the adoption of the constitution, which was the act of the people, with that observed in adopting the confederation, which was the act of the states, may not be altogether useless.

We have seen that the constitution was submitted to the people themselves, assembled in convention

The confederation was submitted to the state legislatures, who adopted or rejected it; and who expressed their approbation by empowering their members in congress, who were their ministers plenipotentiary, to subscribe it in their behalf.

I cannot be mistaken when I say, that no political proposition was ever more fully demonstrated than that maintained by the Supreme Court of the United States, respecting the source from which the government of the Union derives its powers.

I will now show that the very report cited by Amphyction, admits the proposition contained in the opinion he reprobates.

Certain resolutions, he informs us, had been adopted by the legislature of Virginia in 1798, one of which contained the assertion that the assembly viewed "the powers of the federal government as resulting from the compact to which the states are parties." "Those resolutions, (he says) having been disapproved of by most of the other state legislatures, became the subject of examination at the succeeding session, and produced that remarkable commentary which has generally been known by the name of Madison's Report." The language of this commentary on this part of that resolution is, "It is indeed true that the term 'states,' is sometimes used in a vague sense, and sometimes in different senses, according to the subject to which it is applied. Thus it sometimes means the seperate sections of territory occupied by the political societies within each; sometimes the particular governments established by those societies; sometimes those societies as organized into those particular governments; and lastly, it means the people in their highest sovereign capacity."

In which of these senses does the committee assert that the states are parties to the constitution or compact? In that sense in which the term is used to designate the government established by the particular society within the territory!—No. The chairman of that committee had too much self-respect, too much respect for the opinions of intelligent men out of Virginia as well as in it, to advance a proposition so totally untrue. The report continues—"Whatever different constructions of the term 'states' in the resolution may have been entertained, all will at least concur in that last mentioned," (the people composing those political societies in their highest sovereign capacity) "because," the report proceeds, "in that sense the constitution was submitted to the 'states.' In that sense the states ratified it; and in that sense they are consequently parties to the compact from which the powers of the federal government result."

This celebrated report, then, concurs exactly with the Supreme Court, in the opinion that the constitution is the act of the people.

A FRIEND TO THE UNION.

CAUTION.

While our citizens are driven, some to bankruptcy—some to beggary, and all to economy, we lament to find so many resorting to crime; and that it is again our duty to caution our readers against altered, and counterfeited notes, which have been thrown into wide and alarming circulation from Canada to New-Orleans.

Our last accounts from the latter place describe altered notes of the state bank of Georgia—tens into hundreds; and of the bank of Pennsylvania—fives to five hundred.

The counterfeit notes are hundreds, of the Louisiana bank, dated April 1st, 1819, favor Julian Poydras; March 4th, 1818, favor of J. H. Sheppard; same date, favor F. Duplessis. [Balt. Federal Republican.

HARD TIMES IN THE SOUTH.

Extract of a letter from an officer in the United States army to one of the editors of the Inquisitor, dated Baton Rouge, 31st January, 1819.

The banks do no business—not even purchase bills on the eastward or northward. There have been many failures, and many more expected. There are upwards of 300 ships, brigs, and other vessels lying in port at New-Orleans, doing nothing because they know not what to do. Cotton is down, and likely to remain dull, at a low price, and negroes have fallen considerably in value. The people are looking for some change, which will redeem them from their distresses, but no one appears to be able to suggest the proper expedient. It was thought at one time that the banks would suspend specie payments at New-Orleans, but they have all, I believe, determined to act otherwise.

Boston, May 8.

Extract of a letter received in this town by the Two Brothers, at Salem, dated Antwerp, 27th March.

"At the last sale of coffee at Amsterdam, 24th inst. all was withdrawn. After the sale 8000 bags good middling Java were contracted for at 14 stivers—a better result had been expected."

Madrid, March 16.

The king intends to repair to Cadiz before the departure of the armaments fitting out at that port, that he may inspect them himself. The Grand expedition destined for Buenos Ayres will be composed of 14 or 15,000 of the best troops in the world. The Count d' Abisbal, (Gen. O'Donnel) is appointed commander in chief of all that part of America, with general instructions and very ample powers, to act as the times and circumstances may require. He will carry with him a considerable number of officers of different ranks, who, without being attached to this army, may be employed, on their arrival in America, as the wants of the service may demand. These officers served in the war of the Peninsula, and have volunteered their services on this occasion.

The second expedition, destined directly for Lima, instead of 2,000 men, the number first intended, will consist of 4 or 5000 chosen troops. The naval force to escort them will consist of many vessels of the line, frigates, or corvettes, in which a part of the troops will be embarked. It is hoped that the first day of May will witness the departure from Cadiz of these two formidable armaments.

Paris, March 29.

In the course of the last year M. Mollien, hardly 22 years of age, has explored all the regions watered by the Gambia and Rio Grande. After having ascertained the sources of those rivers, he advanced into the country of the southern Foublas to the the town of Teembou, of which it is the capital, and which maj. Rennell places on the Rio Grande, in lat. 10, in long. 10.—Afterwards ascending towards the north, he proceeded towards the source of the Senegal, which he thinks he has correctly ascertained, and which is farther south than has been believed.

Thence he proposed to repair to the Niger and in pursuing it to arrive perhaps at Tombuctou—but the country through which he must pass, being at war, and his guides refusing to conduct him farther, he was obliged; after having braved all the dangers and difficulties inseperable from a rout through barbarous nations, to descend

Addressed to the French Refugees from St. Domingo.

HIS Most Christian Majesty having taken into consideration the hard condition of some of the French refugees from St. Domingo, who have retired into he United States, and whose families or pecuniary affairs recal them to France, and who seem to be without the means of providing for their own passage, has pleased to approve that a man-of-war shall land at New-York the last of June next, to carry to France such of them as may be disposed to return to their native country.

As this favor has been requested to alleviate honorable misfortunes, it is to turn only to the advantage of the unfortunate; therefore, the choice will only fall on the refugees whose situation will be acknowledged to be the most unhappy, and who, besides, will find it beneficial and urgent to return immediately to France.

The Minister of H. M. C. M. wishing to prevent, on this subject, the slightest error, invites the said French persons, who have either applied to him already, or, thinking themselves entitled to enjoy such benefit, would take advantage of it, to cause their requests to be directed to him through the agency of the consuls and vice consuls of France residing in their districts.

The consular agents will communicate to those obtaining a passage certain directions which they ought to follow, as the man-of war of H. M. C. M. is to stop but a few days in the port of New-York.

The editors of the newspapers to which the Minister of France is a subscriber, will be pleased to insert the foregoing notice in their papers two or three times, in order that said French families may be acquainted with it.

Penmanship.

A PRACTICAL, easy running hand warranted, and no compensation received except there is an improvent made to the utmost satistaction of the young ladies and gentlemen who attend.

Those disposed may try the experiment during 12 hours, at the end of which time, if their improvement does not meet their approbation, they may withdraw and no charge made. And further, if those scholars who continue on through the 16 lessons, do not in their own estimation, or in the estimation of their parents or guardians, make more improvement than is generally made in two years, in the old way of teaching, it is requested that no one pay any thing.

During the 16 lessons are taught the small running hand, secretary and Italian hand, the last of which is particularly fashionable for young ladies.

The teacher having had nearly eight years experience at various seminaries of learning and in the principal cities and towns in the United States, offers the advantage of this long experience to all those who apply, during the present week, after which none can be received.

Those disposed to engage, may apply at the writing room, Washington-street, two doors north of King-street, where may be seen specimens of hand writing, acquired in less than one week. Application must be made during the present week—after which not one scholar will be received.

A class of young ladies may attend at any separate hours, either in the morning or evening; and also young ladies who prefer it may take lessons at home.

As this plan of writing embraces the two essential qualities of a good penman, ease and elegance; and as the time necessary to acquire it is merely nothing, it is believed, if its real utility were fully known, not one person of any age, who has the least wish of improving his hand writing, would hesitate to try the experiment. Perhaps this opportunity may not offer again in Alexandria for many years.

Gunston for Sale.

THIS elegant estate is situated on the Potomac, 16 miles below Alexandria—it is bounded on three sides by the Potomac and Pohick creek, and contains nearly 3,000 acres of land, level and fertile, to which are attached six shad and herring fisheries, two of which command the river channel. This land will be laid off in four tracts, so as to have one or more fisheries to each; these tracts will be again divided if requisite. This estate is level and beautifully situated, very fertile, and remarkably healthy. Plaister acts with an effect equal to that of any part of Virginia or Pennsylvania.—I have used 500 bushels in twelve months, and such is its beneficial operation, that were I to keep this land I should considerably increase the quantity. A manufacturing mill is distant about two miles, on a stream navigable for vessels carrying 1200 bushels of wheat, where the Baltimore and Dist. of Columbia prices are given for grain: being bounded on 3 sides by water, a small extent only of fence is necessary to inclose the whole: it would be admirably adapted to grazing. The improvements are a large and very substantial brick mansion, 40 by 70 feet, with every necessary out-house, three commodious barns, houses for Negroes, and fish houses at each of the fisheries. 120,000 bricks and 1000 bushels of lime are just burnt on the premises. There is a considerable extent of live fence, both useful and ornamental, two orchards of well selected apples and peach, besides an abundance of other choice fruit. More than 150 acres are in clover, 200 in corn, and land is in preparation for sowing 250 bushels of small grain. Any quantity of hay can be cut from the low grounds, some of which (and all might,) have been reclaimed at a trifling expense. The river and creeks, abound with wild fowl, particularly canvass backs, the woods with deer and a variety of other game. Mules, cattle, highly improved sheep, farming utensils and household furniture can be had. The terms of sale will be accommodating. Property in any of the cities, negroes, bank stock, western lands, or lands near the Ridge, will be taken in payment.—Letters must be addressed to me at Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia.

September 4 GEORGE MASON.

Valuable Property for Sale.

THE subscriber is desirious of selling a handsomely situated farm, on Hunting creek, in Fairfax county Virginia, adjoining the Mount Vernon estate and the lands of general Thomson Mason, four miles from Alexandria, containing about 240 acres, 80 of which are in wood—40 to 50 in thriving meadow of clover and timothy—a part of the residue recently seeded with wheat and rye, and clover, last spring—the whole enclosed with a new post and rail fence.—The improvements are, a comfortable and convenient frame dwelling house and kitchen, smoke house, poultry house, granary and stables.—There is on this place a rich and productive garden, and a large body of marsh meadow, from which may be saved annually 100 tons of hay, nearly as nutricious as the best timothy or clover.—With the farm would be sold a number of very valuable horses, cows and sheep; waggon, carts, and a variety of farming utensils and household and kitchen furniture; corn, oats and rye, and 40 tons hay. Also, adjoining the one above described, a farm containing 160 acres, recently enclosed, on which is a brick house, which a trifling expense would render comfortable. The soil is excellent, and a considerable part might be easily converted into meadow.—it would be sold with the other or separately. Also, a number of valuable servants, male and female. To prevent unnecessary application, he would observe, that hey will only be sold to persons residing in the District or its vicinity, and not to be carried from it. The subscriber will also sell the greater part of his household furniture, which is new and handsome. For terms of all or any part of the above property, apply to NOBLET HERBERT, esq. or

For the information of all persons throughout the U. States, R. Blacking for Boots & Shoes,

Superior to any ever offered to the public.

ROBERT COCHRAN,

No. 48, North Fourth-street, next door to the Green Tree Inn, Philadelphia.

WITH confidence offers to the public, his superior Portable and Liquid blacking, so much admired and approved of, which is manufactured by himself only.

This blacking possesses every desirable quality, being of an oily nature, it preserves the leather perfectly soft to the last, and keeps it from cracking—it is a jet black, affords a most superlative polish, entirely free from any offensive smell, and so clean as not to soil the whitest muslin or any other substance it may chance to run against, and will keep in any climate—it has a peculiar advantage in being put up in a portable manner, and may be packed without possibility of risque, with the nicest clothes or goods. The Portable Blacking is much adapted for gentlemen residing or travelling in the country, where materials for making Blacking is not to had, and as for cheapness and elegance, far exceeds any ever imported or manufactured in the union. Where is sold as above, the beautiful Chinese Liquid Blacking, for ladies morocco boots and shoes, which makes the oldest morocco boots or shoes appear the same as when new. Sold wholesale at the manufactory, as above.

N. B. Please observe that each bottle it sealed and signed by the proprietor, to prevent spurious impressions being imposed on the public.

It may be had at the following places in Alexandria.——Dr. Stabler and Richard Woods on Fairfax street,—Dr. Semmes, & Dr. Little's apothecary shops, on King-street.—Isaac Entwisles, shoe factory, and Thomas Mount's factory & Hardware store on King-street. sw2m March 20

Charlotte Hall School.

THE board of trustees for Charlotte Hall school deem it their duty to announce to the public, the present flourishing condition of this institution. Since the introduction of the present professors, the school has rapidly progressed in the public estimation.

When Philip Briscoe, esq. was called to assume the office of Principal, there were but 27 pupils. The liberality of the State Legislature of 1817, enabled the trustees to retain his services and those of Mr. Miltimore for the classical department—the Reverend Mr. Neale H. Shaw has also been retained as professor of mathematicks, and he is aided in that department by Mr. Sweetsee, a gentleman in high estimation as a professor. Under the management of these gentlemen the school has now 95 boys; and very many applications have already been made for entrance and board. Heretofore a portion of the boys have been compelled to board at the neighboring houses at too great a distance from the school; the trustees are now making arrangements which will enable fifty boys more to be accommodated immediately at the school; so that at all times the Principal will be enabled to exercise a general superintendance over their moral department (to the corruption of which, the boys in this retired village have but few temptations). The board will remark to those who are unacquainted with this place, that no part of Maryland is more distinguished for its general healthiness. The price of board is only 100 dollars a year. The tuition is now but 28 dollars a year! It will be raised after August to 32 dollars—a price much lower, however, than any of the public schools of our state.

It is intended then by the trustees to select four boys (of poor and indigent parents) of promise, and to board, clothe, and educate them entirely at the expense of the institution, and afterwards to labor to procure them that station to which their talents and conduct may entitle them.

Signed, by order,

NEALE H. SHAW, Reg'r.
